Call for expressions of interest for a range of systems and services

A UN agency has recently designed a multi-country programme on strengthening Climate Information and Early Warning Systems (CI/EWS) for climate resilient development and adaptation to climate change. The CI/EWS initiatives respond to national priorities and actions of the targeted countries to improve their capacity to measure, adapt and respond to climate change. This includes strengthening existing and establishing new weather and climate observing and forecasting systems as well as ensuring that climate change-related information is sustainably included as an integral part of the decision-making policies and processes at the national and local level. They are seeking Expressions of Interest’s from potential suppliers of a number of observation and forecasting systems and services who may be interested in a future Invitation for Proposal.
