The extended anticyclonic blocking periods that occurred during the winters of 2009 and 2010, brought low wind speeds and temperatures and high energy demand. DECC want to understand the significance of such events for power resilience in a future with an increased dependence on...